New Jersey's Billions.

"New Jersey is one of the richest States in the country and is far ahead of its rival States in the Middle West," said one of the tax commissioners of Essex county a few days ago. "According to a calculation based upon the returns of the last State census, the aggregate wealth of the State, including personal property, real estate, railroads, trolley properties, stocks and bonds is $3,300,000,000. The population of the State by the census for 1905 having been shown to be 3,144,143, the total per capita wealth of the State amounts to $1,539. The census authorities who are in position to make the calculation say that New Jersey stands second or third in the list of States on the basis of per capita wealth and that at the present rate of increase another five years will in all probability find her in the first place.

"The census reports give the assessed valuations as $1,153,682,961. This is shown by comparison to be an increase of 40 per cent. over the valuations of 1903, due to the operation of the new tax assessment law. But the assessment of 1904 showed an actual healthy increase of something like 12 per cent. over the previous year, both assessments having been made prior to the adoption of the new assessment law. This last assessment presents about 80 per cent. of the taxable value possessed by the State. The actual value of taxable property is therefore approximately $2,000,000,000. There are in the State, in addition to this, some $500,000,000 in railroad property, mostly in the northern part of the State, which has got to be known as the 'metropolitan district' that are exempt from taxes. To this may be added about $100,000,000 in exempt real estate, approximately $300,000,000 in stocks and bonds and other properties which are exempt, and it is estimated that, owing to the nominal assessment of personal property in the State, at least $300,000,000 of exempt values should be charged to that item. Besides this there is about $100,000,000 in saving banks which is unassessed. These several items added bring the total of individual possessions of the people of the State, as stated before, to $3,300,000,000. The actual total wealth of the State itself cannot be calculated even approximately because State properties which are worth millions of dollars are untaxed and no estimate is made of their values. There are also millions of dollars worth of railroad property whose estimated values must be much less than actual values.

"The calculation is close enough to show that New Jersey is about $1,500,000,000 richer than the report of the census board shows, and a comparison with the figures of previous years proves her advance to be very rapid. If the actual increase of the wealth of the State were known, there is no doubt that New Jersey would be found far richer than any of her sister States in proportion to size and population.

"The items of New Jersey's increased wealth if available would show that the greatest advance has been made along the lines of industrial enterprise, railroad and trolley building and home building in the five northern counties. For the purpose of estimating just to what extent these improvements have gone, the boards of trade of our several cities are now making investigations on which a report will be compiled as early next year as possible. We expect to show by this report that New Jersey's increased wealth is substantial, and that none of it represents false values."

The Farmers' Thanksgiving Showing.
Thanksgiving being a harvest festival it is appropriate that the residents of our State should know how important a place the State occupies among the agricultural States of the country. Though among the smallest of the forty-six States, there being but four having a smaller population, New Jersey last year paid on its farms a proportionate return second only in amount to that recorded by Iowa, the richest agricultural State in the country. According to the last report of the Department of Agriculture New Jersey possesses 34,550 farms, upon which one-fifth of the population of the State depend for their livelihood. The total return on these farms was $35,052,609; in other words an actual return of $1,011.62 per farm, an amount only a few dollars less than that recorded for the fertile fields of Iowa, the return for that State being $1,100 per farm.

The ability of the New Jersey farmers to dispose of their products quickly by means of the unusual transportation facilities existing between the farming districts and all of the large markets in the State alone makes possible the great returns from agricultural products recorded above. The farming district of the State lies between the more densely metropolitan districts adjacent to New York at the north and Philadelphia at the south. This intervening territory is traversed by numerous steam railroads and trolley lines which render possible the easiest intercommunication, not only between cities and cities, but between farms and cities. Besides its agricultural prosperity New Jersey has to its credit other resources which are exceeded by few if any of its rival States. In the last five years there has been an increase of $1,500,000,000 in her wealth. Industries representing $240,000,000 of capital, employing 70,000 wage earners and producing $221,000,000 in manufactured products have come from other States to New Jersey. In the banks of the State are deposited $333,000,000, of which $62,000,000 are held by the savings banks to the credit of the working men. This total gives a per capita bank deposit to the State of $155. New Jersey also possesses a greater railroad mileage than one-fourth of the States in the country. Her per capita industrial wealth exceeds that of her rival States and she has to her credit a total per capita wealth second only to the wealthiest States.

Shubert Theatre.
Henry Woodruff comes to the Shubert Theatre, Newark, on Monday, December 3, in "Brown of Harvard," the spirited college play which ran for one hundred and fifty nights in New York, and over one hundred nights in Chicago. The engagement is for one week. This college play which, in New York and Chicago, more than duplicated the success of "The College Widow" and "Strong Heart," is the first play supposed to be a faithful reflection of daily life in America's oldest and most famous university. The sports and the youthful life in this play are what every man who has gone to college has seen or enjoyed in greater or less degree. The play is filled with the spirit of youth which is probably the best explanation of its success. It is acted by young men and young women all of whom are but recently out of college themselves. They are still inspired by the enthu-siasms and ambitions which helped them through school. For this reason, playing in "Brown of Harvard" is merely living over again scenes and incidents still fresh in their memory. Matinees, Wednesday and Saturday.
